

In the District

At the beginning of last year, our nation was still going through the throes of a pandemic. Many people and businesses were still feeling the effects of the previous year. As the First District was coming back to life, I met with members of our local community to see how things were progressing. It was great to see the strength and resilience of so many members of our community.

In February, I visited the Little Miami Food Pantry. Organizations like the food pantry are great examples of how communities can come together in the toughest of times.

In April, I met with Thane Maynard, the CEO of the Cincinnati Zoo, to discuss how their PPP loan helped the zoo stay safe during the pandemic.

During the beginning stages of the COVID-19 vaccine rollout, I met with Sam's club Pharmacy Manager Greg Lunchan, Pharmacy Market Manager Thomas Miller, and Store Manager Robert Mill. They walked me through their staff training process, and we discussed the different types of vaccines that they would be administering to the public.

Libraries have always been a place for students and adults alike to work in a quiet environment with a vast supply of resources at their fingertips. The Cincinnati and Hamilton County Public Library (CHPL) is one of our community's greatest assets. Price Hill Branch Manager Sondra Presley led me on a tour of the newly renovated Price Hill branch, which includes more space and additional resources to meet the needs of students and other library visitors.

Our hospital workers gave so much to help our local communities over the past year. Back in May, I had the opportunity to tour the University of Cincinnati's Gardner Neuroscience Institute. While there, I was briefed on their comprehensive plans to expand the Medical Center Emergency Department and met with the healthcare officials and patients. Many thanks to Dr. Lofgren and his team for the informative discussion.

The effects of the pandemic not only affected rentals, but new housing construction as well. In May, I met with the Home Builders Association to discuss how the rising cost of lumber and other building materials has been impacting housing affordability.

In continued efforts to better understand the problems facing the construction community, I met with President and CEO of Messer Construction Co., Tim Steigerwald. We discussed Messer's job growth plan for the region, their work with Cincinnati Children's Hospital, and the importance of replacing the Brent Spence Bridge.

As summer transitioned to fall, our nation was confronted with significant supply chain issues. Many companies were unable to stock their shelves because cargo ships were stranded at sea on the West Coast. This issue affected many businesses coast to coast. I had the opportunity to tour Northside Distilling. We discussed several supply chain issues, how tariffs are negatively affecting their industry, their plans to grow into a new facility and create more jobs, the effectiveness of PPP loans, and the negative impacts of inflation.

In October, the Warren County Chamber Alliance attended their 6th Annual Washington, D.C. Fly-In. We had a great discussion regarding infrastructure, the budget, and other issues impacting local businesses as we continue to deal with the throes of the pandemic.
